When the  $\alpha$  (alpha score) is higher than sig. score, so  $H_0$  is rejected, if the  $\alpha$  (alpha score) is lower than sig. score, means  $H_0$  is accepted.

While using the manual, the formula is to measure r table, that the result is significant contribution for both variables, to see how strength the significant coefficient correlation, and researcher finds out that  $r_0$  is higher than r table that  $0.940 > 0.232$  at significant level of 5% and  $0.303 < 0.940$  at significant level of 1%, meaning that the hypothesis alternative ( $H_a$ ) is accepted and the hypothesis nul ( $H_0$ ) is rejected.
